

Dear FCC: Thirty years ago, when I took communication courses at Boston University, we were taught that the FCC was supposed to protect the American People's common means of communication. Now you waste your time chasing after Howard Stern and protecting Americans from Janet Jackson's boob. C'mon folks -- our NJ State Government did something to really protect us by letting us make the choice. Being on the NJ NO CALL LIST is no different than when I shut off the 2004 Superbowl (before the Jackson incident) because I was bored, or switch to a another radio station when Stern rants about penis size. That is true constitutional freedom of, AND freedom from, speech. Please lay off the NJ NO CALL LIST.
